Documentary producer/director JOSEPH LOVETT (producer of the first in-depth AIDS investigations for national television at ABC News' "20/20") focuses his lens on the unbridled sexual passion and exploration that marked the years from Stonewall to the first reported cases of AIDS. With access to a treasure trove of films and photographs chronicling erotic life on New York's West Side piers, bars, dance clubs, bathhouses and beaches, Lovett's cast of storytellers share their stories with remarkable wit, humor and perspective. For younger people who became sexually active during the age of AIDS, this film may be a startling revelation.

A panel discussion will explore how the legacies of the sexual revolution and gay liberation movement have impacted current issues in gay male sexuality.

Admission is by invitation only—no charge.
